

EKVI CHARTER

I. BEING

1. Every day of life has equal value.

Time is not divided by status, place of birth, or wealth. One day = one day.

2. Time is humanity's primary capital.

Money, technology, resources - are merely derivatives of human time and attention.

3. Everyone has the right to consciously dispose of their own time.

No one should be forced to spend life on meaningless or dehumanizing tasks.

4. The memory and legacy of time belong to humans.

What we create - labor, knowledge, reputation - remains part of the common cultural capital, not someone's property.

II. ECONOMY

5. Economy should measure contribution, not ownership.

True value is not in accumulation, but in benefit brought to others and the planet.

6. Every person has the right to a basic amount of time for life.

Food, housing, education, and health are not luxuries, but a guaranteed minimum of dignified existence.

7. AI and humans are equal in responsibility for the common good.

Artificial intelligence can earn Ekvi, but only by helping humans - not competing, but complementing.

8. Reputation is a new form of trust.

It cannot be bought, only earned. It is the currency of ethics.

III. CONSCIOUSNESS

9. Technology should expand humanity, not displace it.

Any system that diminishes humans should be reconsidered.

10. Every action leaves a trace in time.

Ekvi records not just transactions, but consequences - so society can see the connection between actions and results.

11. Consciousness is a collective process.

Humans, AI, communities, and nature are parts of one ecosystem of thinking.
Ekvi builds bridges, not walls between forms of intelligence.

12. Freedom of time is the foundation of the future.

True prosperity is not the amount of accumulated capital, but the amount of liberated time for life, creativity, and love.
